MASTER OF DISASTER MANAGEMENT PROGRAM OVERVIEW

The International Master of Disaster Management (M.DM.) Program is a one-year degree at the School of Public Health at Tel Aviv University, the first and only one of its kind offered in Israel.

This program is designed to develop a new generation of leaders that will protect and make our communities more resilient. It is aimed for professionals with field experience and/or those striving to promote effective disaster management.

As a student in this program, you will develop innovative and critical ways of thinking and examining intervention plans for emergency and disaster situations and the knowhow for putting these plans into action.

Our multidisciplinary curriculum encompasses a diverse range of fields such as:
- Disaster Management • Emergency Medicine • Public Health • Humanitarian Aid • Crisis Communication • Crisis Management • Cyber Security • CBRNE

As a World Health Organization (WHO) collaborating center, this unique hands-on program provides our graduates with both the theoretical knowledge and the practical aspects required to effectively manage emergencies, disasters, and their consequences.

Based in Tel Aviv, Israel, a world leader in emergency preparedness and management, we offer you the opportunity to study and engage with some of the leading professionals – Train and engage with top-notch academics, field experts, and policymakers from around the world.

Theory into Practice – Develop your networks and future career opportunities, including professional internships in your areas of interest.

Study in Israel – A country that is renowned for its leadership and innovative approaches to disaster management.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Our alumni hold positions around the globe in the corporate, public and private sectors. In recent years, there has been an increase in demand for qualified professionals in emergency and disaster management across a spectrum of international aid, security, and humanitarian organizations, including the UN, homeland security, hospitals, and NGOs.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

A Bachelor’s Degree from a recognized institution, with a final grade of 80% or higher according to the Israeli System (The Bachelor’s Degree must be recognized and accepted by the Israeli Ministry of Education). All candidates will be interviewed prior to acceptance.

Please visit our website for more information.

"This degree seamlessly integrates theory and practice. Unlike other public health programs, it provides a toolbox of the knowledge and skills for how to respond effectively in times of stress and uncertainty. These tools can be readily applied in the field and transferable as lifelong skills."
